

Tony Giaccio

"I like travelling over South Australia. I am smart. I like chess and I played in the inter-school chess tournaments in 2013. I won most games but not all of them. I have been drawing landscapes of the Adelaide Hills earlier this year and now I am doing country towns of South Australia. My media are coloured pencils and outlining after, using a fine liner. I also used paint when I've done the canvas picture of Hope Forest which is near Willunga. When I've finished all of my country towns, my workmate suggested that I can do the suburbs of Adelaide".

Tony Giaccio started working in the Tutti Visual Arts Studio in 2013 after completing Year 12 at Immanuel College. Using his highly developed observational skills, Giaccio often explores landscape themes inspired by his love of traveling. Giaccio also draws inspiration from Chess a game he is highly skilled at. Working in mediums such as drawing and painting, he has developed a strong graphic style. Giaccio is an

About the event

The Tutti Visual Arts Studio established in 2005, is a vibrant and unique arts practice program for young adults with a learning disability.

Tutti is committed to enabling some of the most disadvantaged Australians to gain new knowledge, confidence and the capacity to express themselves. This feeds into both personal and artistic outcomes so that each artist can generate income from the art they produce.

The Studio offers a space to work, professional guidance and quality materials. Artists are also supported to present their work in a professional manner to ensure they are accorded the same dignity and respect as their non-disabled peers.

Tutti is a not for profit disability arts organisation founded in 1997 by Pat Rix. We rely on government funds, personal and philanthropic donations, and commissions from artwork sales to continue our work.

"Tutti means 'everyone', and this underpins our determination to work towards a more equitable society. Tutti is about full access and equal opportunity. Where people with disability are left out, we must work to change the rules. Nothing is impossible if we tackle it together." Pat Rix

The Tutti Macquarie Private Wealth Art Exhibition, proudly supported and hosted by Macquarie Private Wealth, displays a range of unique works for sale by emerging artists from the Tutti Visual Arts Studios.

Grace Bell

"I am really over passionate about animals. I am a big animal lover. I like painting animals, dots, and patterns. I use mixed media; felt pens, pencils and paint, and experimenting with different styles and media".

Grace Bell joined the Tutti Visual Arts Studio in 2010. During her time in the Studio she has developed a strong Graphic Style inspired by her love of animals and nature. Bell likes to work in strong bold colours and often incorporates bright eye catching patterns into her designs. Bell has exhibited in over six Tutti exhibitions to date. A career highlight for Bell was when the renowned cook Maggie Beer purchased one of her works.

Jackie Saunders

"I like doing dot paintings of different animals because it is calming and helps me connect to my aboriginal heritage and culture".

Jackie Saunders joined the Tutti Visual Arts Studio in 2013 where she has been exploring pattern styles and symbols using traditional dot painting techniques. In 2013 her artwork was featured in the Flinders City Gallery as part of 'Their Shadows in Us' a project where her work investigated the social history of Minda though an indigenous perspective. She has since participated in several Tutti group exhibitions and developed a keen following, selling almost all of her pieces to date.

Kimberly Sellers

"I like cartoons, Japanese art and surrealism. I loved art as a kid, and I have done art at high school and Flinders University. I like to do fairy tale characters and dragons. I was born in the year of the dragon".

Kimberly has exhibited in all Tutti exhibitions to date and her work is well regarded, with numerous sales. The Flinders Medical Centre's Arts in Health Program bought her painting "Witch Jealousy, Snow White is the fairest of them all" from the 2012 Adelaide Fringe exhibition 'Monsters and Fairy Tales'. In 2010 two of Sellers' paintings were selected for the 'field' Victoria exhibition at Collingwood Gallery, Melbourne, Victoria.

Megan Long

"I like people. I like getting ideas for my work from looking at pictures on the computer. I try different ways of getting results in my work. I enjoy drawing flowers, sunsets and seascapes".

Megan Long began working in the Tutti Visual Arts Studio at the beginning of 2014. Taking inspiration from flowers and animals, Long often uses mixed media techniques to create vibrant, watery and flowing works on paper. Long has exhibited in Tutti's 2014 SALA exhibition and the Royal Adelaide Purchase Prize Exhibition.

Tessa Crathern

"I like patterns. And skulls, vampires, werewolves, witches – all the scary stuff. I like drawing patterns with coloured pencils".

Joining the Tutti Visual Arts Studio in 2008, Crathern is one of the most prolific artists, consistently creating endless varieties of patterns on a daily basis. Crathern draws inspiration from listening to music as she methodically constructs her array of kaleidoscopic patterns. Other artworks have explored contrasting themes such as werewolves, vampires and Porsche cars. Crathern's work has been extensively exhibited in Tutti art exhibitions as well as featured in the 2013 APAC (Asia Pacific Autism Conference) and recently in the pop up exhibition called Mr Ist.
