Tutti Arts

South Australia is home to many Arts and Disability organisations as well as Deaf and disabled artists creating work in the areas of music, dance, theatre, visual arts, film and new media. Many South Australian artists and organisations are recognised nationally and internationally as leaders in Arts and Disability.

The arts play an important role in everyone's life. Whether it's reading, drama, visual art, dance or music, art enriches our lives and expands our horizons.

Accessing the right artistic experience can open up new opportunities to discover and explore your talents, self-expression and self-determination.

Engagement in the arts can lead to:

- improved well-being
- enriched life experiences
- increased self confidence
- improved sense of belonging and connection with others
- empowerment
- a sense of achievement and worth in society.

Are you born to be on stage? Everything at No Strings starts in a workshop - the Ignition Point - where theatre experimentation & (dis)ability meet.

Experience this unique co-design process. Our weekly theatre workshop programs are tailored to the needs, abilities & skills of each participant. Professional theatre mentors consult & collaborate with performers to explore themes & ideas, to create award-winning theatre together. Come and try for FREE. Everyone is welcome.

Restless Dance Theatre

Restless runs inclusive workshops led by highly experienced tutors, which involve creating movement in a safe and fun environment.

No experience is necessary, just the desire to take part. Workshops and productions provide positive outcomes for participants by encouraging independence and inclusion. The creative abilities of the participants with disability are the heart of all Restless projects.
