Tutti Arts

South Australia is home to many Arts and Disability companies and Deaf and disabled artists who make work in the areas of music, dance, theatre, visual arts, film and new media. Many SA artists and organisations are recognised nationally and internationally as leaders in Arts and Disability.

The arts play an important role in everyone's life. Whether it's reading, drama, visual art, dance or music they inform everyone's daily existence; enriching our lives and expanding our horizons.

Accessing the right artistic experience can open up new opportunities to discover and explore your talents, self-expression, and self-determination.

Engagement in the arts can lead to:

- improved well-being
- enriched life experiences
- increased self confidence
- improved sense of belonging and connection with others
- empowerment
- a sense of achievement and worth in society.

Connecting with the arts provides the foundation for a rich and satisfying life. So when planning your NDIS supports, make sure you include the arts!

No Strings

Original theatre co-created with and by people living with disability.

Restless Dance Theatre

Unexpectedly real

Restless runs inclusive workshops led by highly experienced tutors, which involve creating movement in a safe and fun environment.

No experience is necessary, just the desire to take part.

Workshops and productions provide positive outcomes for participants by encouraging independence and inclusion. The creative abilities of the participants with disability are the heart of all Restless projects.
